

Interpreting Wine is arguably the world's premier wine trade podcast. Since 2018, Founder Lawrence Francis has established a premium content library and a loyal, engaged listener base in 135 countries.

In the first ten months of 2020 the channel received an average listener engagement of 5,130 hours per month. Meanwhile, average listening for interviews published in 2020 is more than 375 hours per episode.

Lawrence speaking at Wine2Wine 2019

Interpreting Wine has pioneered the use of podcast series to immerse listeners in a specific region or wine style, delivered across podcast, website and social media. For the first time ever, you can access Interpreting Wine's audience without the premium pricing of "made-to-order" series. Communicate with global trade professionals without the need for costly, time consuming travel, tastings, live webinars or social media.

Released in November 2019, the original nine-part series is the channel's most in depth coverage of a wine category. Listen stats for the 2019 Sherry Week series:

Series listen link	www.interpretingwine.com/sherry
Total series listens	7,791 plays
Total series listening duration	2,780 hours
Average episode listening	309 hours

The June 2021 edition looks set to be even more popular, speaking to an audience that is already familiar with the region, its wines and winemakers.

If your winery would like to feature, here's how it works:

- Secure your place for one advance payment of EUR795.
- Upon payment, you will be sent a set of detailed preparation materials.
- Optional: wines chosen and sent to Lawrence for virtual taste-along episode.
- Interview recorded remotely in-line with agreed production schedule.
- Episode edited, released and promoted as part of the series.

Just 10 spaces available. Contact Lawrence to discuss more.

Lawrence Francis, Content Director hello@interpretingwine.com +44 20 8058 0546